A LESSON IN DEMOCRACY

Has it ever been your misfortune to contact one of those "anonymous" secretaries when you have called at an office to see the boss? Have you ever tried to reach people by telephone and found all avenues blocked?

It has and in a couple of minutes worked myself into a lather which kept foaming for several days afterwards.

While not trying to give myself any of the best of it, I do not believe I look or act like a criminal or one bent on dark deeds. But I confess that it gets my "angora" when I am asked my name, business, and previous condition of servitude. I have been subjected to catechisms such as no life insurance company ever devised until my life, soul and all within me was laid bare, even to what I had to eat at the last meal. No X-ray ever disclosed any more and I have always left such places feeling stripped and naked and with my ego doing an over-time job.

While I realize that a certain routine is necessary in the conduct of an office and no busy man can afford to be pestered with hores there should be a happy medium. I believe I have enough sense not to play social calls during business hours and I have always made it a strict rule to state what I am.

80 PER CENT VOTE CAST

One of the most hotly contested municipal elections in the city of El Cerrito was fought to a conclusion yesterday when the voters went to the polls to the number of 1764, out of a registration of 2234, casting an 80 per cent vote, and determined who should serve them in a public capacity for the next two years.

From the unofficial returns, the winners in the race for councilmen are: Peter Larsen, 788; William F. Huber, 772, and Blake McNeill, 523. For city clerk Jack Stoddard won the coveted position over A. J. Chiappe by the narrow margin of 12 votes. Stoddard received 305 votes and Chiappe 293. The heavy vote in the two Mira Vista precincts was what put Stoddard over the top.

BECK NOSED OUT
J. Ralph Beck, who has served as councilman for the past eight years was nosed out by but 7 votes. There are seventeen absent voters ballots that will be counted next Monday, but it is not believed that Beck will receive enough of these to offset the small lead of McNeill. Still such a contingency is possible.

RESULTS JUSTIFIES ODDS
W. D. Stark, Charles Kaufmann, L. A. McNabb and E. A. Morrill for councilmen, and S. C. Masterson, Jr. for clerk, were bad losers, clearly indicating that the betting odds that were published in Sunday morning's RECORD-HERALD were made by those who were in the "know."

PUBLISHER IS LEADING IDAHO IDOL

CHICAGO (Wednesday) Apr. 15.—UP—Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, and Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, rivals for Illinois' 57 delegate votes at the G. O. P. convention, were counted on virtually even terms in the State presidential primary early today.

Knox piled up a huge vote in Cook county (Chicago) but it was greatly off-set down state where Borah showed surprising strength as returns mounted.

RETURNS GIVEN

In 2501 Cook county precincts returns gave:

Knox	131,159
Borah	80,910

This wide Knox margin was narrowing down State, where 156 precincts gave:

Knox	10,379
Borah	12,000

The combined total for 2656 of the State's 7430 precincts:

Knox	141,538
Borah	93,522

The coming state convention at Coronado on May 25, 26, 27 and 28 was discussed.

The next meeting will be held at Pittsburg in the near future.

Dr. Harry Ford of Richmond presided last evening. A buffet luncheon was served.

WATERFRONT CRISIS NEAR; FEAR STRIKE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 14.—UP—Shipowners struck hold-ly tonight to cut through a snarl of labor troubles by severing all further relations with the San Francisco local of the International Longshoremen's Association.

After a day of futile, angry conferences over the issue of handling cargo from the Grace liner Santa Rosa declared "unfair" by the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, the Waterfront Employers' Association announced the drastic move.

LONG BATTLE

Their decision culminated three years of bickering, fighting, "quickie" strikes and desperate controversy in which charges have ranged from murder and mutiny to labor union snafus and campaigns.

Harry Bridges, peppy, militant leader of the local I. L. A. and the San Francisco council of the Maritime Federation, received the owners' ultimatum. Bridges did not make any statement following the surprise announcement, and the I. L. A. S. course remained uncertain.

DEMANDS REFUSED

Severance of relations between the owners and union came after the Grace line had refused Bridges and other members of the Federation Council the right to examine International Seamen's Union credentials carried by the crew of the Santa Rosa.

Huber Thanks Cerrito Voters

To The Voters of El Cerrito: The flattering vote given me by the voters of El Cerrito I take as an endorsement of my efforts in their behalf as city councilman, and for their expression of confidence I am deeply and sincerely grateful.

In one sense of the word I was not an active candidate. I had publicly announced that if a continuance of my public service was demanded by the people they could so express themselves at the polls.

I had conscientiously done my best in their behalf and I felt it was incumbent on them to say whether my services had been satisfactory or not; I now have the answer and am very much pleased.

I take this method of thanking all those who voted for me and to assure them that I will continue, in the past to exert my utmost endeavors for the upbuilding and betterment of our city.

W. F. HUBER

Stoddard Grateful For His Election

To The Voters of El Cerrito: The confidence expressed in me by the voters of El Cerrito I feel I can best pay by rendering efficient service in the office of city clerk, and this I will endeavor to do to the best of my ability. That will be my thanks for their votes.

In voicing my appreciation I desire at the same time to pay tribute to my opponents who conducted courteous campaigns, devoid of personalities or misrepresentations.

JACK STODDARD.

PENN RELAYS OFFER 4 TESTS FOR OLYMPICS

PHILADELPHIA, April 14.—UP—The 1936 Penn Relays are being dressed up in fine style, with four Olympic events slated for collegiate track competition.

The relays to be held on Franklin Field April 24 and 25 are expected to attract more than 1,000 crack athletes from various sections of the country. But the program has been given more zest with the addition of the 3,000 meter steeplechase, the 400-meter hurdles, the hop-step and jump, and the 100-meter event—all standard Olympic contests.

Usually, the first three events are contested only in the National A. A. U. outdoor championships and seldom are run by collegiate tracksters in a college meet.

The 100-meter dash was inaugurated last year to take the place of the 100 yard run, and still another innovation has been scheduled for 1936. It is the limitation of entries in the century dash. Heretofore, the event has been open to all, but this year, runners may compete by invitation only.

H. Jameson Swarts, manager of the carnival, hopes to limit the entries in the century dash to five or eight men. If such strict limitation is possible, only two preliminary heats would be necessary.

This, according to Swarts, would make the race more worthwhile, and tend to give the event nationwide importance.

Two of the outstanding stars of the country—Jesse Owens, Ohio State Negro star, and Eulace Peacock, Temple dash man—already have been entered in the 100 meters.

Their duel alone is expected to be one of the highlights of the 1936 relays. Peacock and Owens, who also are outstanding men in the broad jump have met numerous times on the track without either establishing definite superiority.

PATRONS OF DINNER GET MONEY'S WORTH

Patrons of the candidates dinner staged in Memorial Hall Monday evening by the Ladies Aid of the El Cerrito Methodist church got their money's worth in excitement as well as in eats when the candidates made their last pre-election talks. Words flew fast and furious and fists were shaken and a fight threatened when Candidate Charles Kauffman aroused the ire of Council Peter Larsen when he charged that the present Council is responsible for gambling in El Cerrito. Larsen jumped from his chair threatening Kauffman whereupon Candidate Stark jumped to his feet to interview and cries of "Sit down," were heard from various quarters. After a few joking remarks by the chairman, however, things quieted down again and the candidates all went home apparently good natured.

The dinner was good, the crowd was large and the speeches were interesting and so it may be said that "a good time was had by all."

MASS SLAYER DENIED PLEA TO BE HANGED

QUINCY, Wash., April 14.—UP—A mass slayer, convicted of the murder of six persons near Bremerton, Ore., today denied the state's plea that he be hanged after the Supreme Court had refused to grant a writ of habeas corpus.

A five justice opinion stated that the state's plea for a new trial was not a new trial. It will be returned to Port Orchard, where he was convicted in December, to be re-sentenced by Judge H. G. Sutton. He probably will be executed next month.

Hall's attorney attacked the verdict because the former boxer and hockey player was tried jointly with Peggy Peterson Paulos, principal witness against him.

Paulos broke the case in October, when she said authorities accompanied Hall on a house party robbery which ended in the murder of four men and two women. The jury that convicted Hall quit.

The high court held that in such cases the matter of joint or separate trials was at the discretion of the judge.

In the "escape-proof" Thurston County Jail, where he has been confined since his conviction, the said he would "continue fighting against the noose. He has gained 30 pounds in the past four months."

NEW FILM IN COLOR AT FOX ON THURSDAY

Tomorrow the color camera invades the great outdoors for the first time in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," at the Fox theatre when the picture screens on a double program with George M. Cohan's famous Broadway hit, "Song and Dance Man."

Fred MacMurray, Sylvia Sydney are co-stars in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" which promises to tint the Fox screen with the colorful Blue Ridge Mountains.

Sylvia Sydney's charm and beauty is said to be enhanced by the photography. Fred MacMurray and Henry Fonda, too, are particularly pleasing. Fred S. one, an old party teller, and Fuzzy Knight, a wandering mountain warbler, as well as Nigel Bruce, Spanky McFarland, Alan Baxter and Renah Bondi contribute much in supporting roles.

Starting Paul Kelly, Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen and Ruth Donnelly, "Song and Dance Man" reveals the drama of a poor hobo and egg song and dance man whose girl had a chance to make the big time if he stepped down and out. The girl, however, refuses to take advantage of the opportunity offered to her by a wealthy playboy because of her loyalty to the man who taught her all she knew.

The hooper, realizing he is holding her back, puts on a phoney drunk and splits up the partnership. The girl, having no other alternative accepts the chance and goes on to stardom. The road to fame on Broadway has its obstacles, and only when the hooper returns to help the girl overcome those obstacles does one realize the extent of his self-sacrifice.

The picture also features four new song numbers. Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper in "Desire" and "One Way Ticket" starring Walter Connelly, Lloyd Nolan and an all star cast, are the two features playing for the last times today at the Fox.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

WASHINGTON, April 14.—A low newspaper publisher, who has known Colonel Frank Knox for many years, recently remarked: "I wonder if Frank hasn't scooped himself on the Republican nomination?"

The probabilities are that he has. As far back as April last year, "Knox Headquarters" were in evidence at the American Newspaper Publishers Convention. As far back as July, long before Governor Landon or Senator Borah had tossed their hats in the ring, Knox was storming at Roosevelt.

"Upon what does this our Caesar feed? What madness has seized upon him? Does he not see how dangerously close this comes to conspiracy to break down our institution of government?"

It is the proud boast of the Colonel that all GOP aspirants he is Anti-New Deal Enemy No. 1. But, having been in the war drums and sounded the call to arms, Knox now finds himself like so many other leaders in battle, elbowing out of the limelight. Even a victory in the Illinois primary (April 14) will make no real change in the situation.

The trouble with Knox is that he has gone about building himself up as a candidate as he had gone about building himself up as a newspaper executive. And the two fields are entirely different.

NEWSPAPER CAREER
 The Colonel is one of the shrewdest and most successful newspaper publishers in the country. His progress up to the ownership of The Chicago Daily News was no accident. He built up the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald, then bought the Manchester (N. H.) Leader, became an important executive in the Hearst organization, and during this time, dabbled a bit in Republican politics.

Meanwhile Walter Strong, publisher of The Chicago Daily News, died, specifying in his will that the employees of the paper be given the first opportunity to buy it.

James Lawrence Houghteling, vice president of The News, and "related by marriage to" Franklin Roosevelt, worked for this. But the paper was heavily in debt to Daves bank, the Central Republic Trust, and Daves, returning suddenly to the United States from his ambassadorial post in Great Britain, intervened in order to swing the paper into the Republican camp.

Senator George Moses, GOP mogul also a New Hampshire publisher, recommended Knox, and after consultation between Daves and Hoover, Knox got the job—and the paper.

SACROSANCT HOOVER
 Knox has been a big success with The Chicago Daily News as he was with everything in life—except politics. He has won the respect of his men, but not their love. They talk glowingly about their paper, but not about their publisher.

During the Hoover Administration, one idea was uppermost in Knox's mind: friendship for the man in the White House. There was nothing he would not do for Herbert Hoover.

This has continued since Hoover left office. In fact, when Neely Faxon, one of the most brilliant members of The Daily News' foreign staff, wrote a critical review of Hoover's book in a London paper, Knox discharged him by cable—which may have been a blessing to Faxon, for he promptly sat down and wrote a new best-seller, "The Way of a Transgressor."

OLD PEOPLE find way to keep breath wholesome
 Halitosis (bad breath) quickly yields to Listerine, safe antiseptic and deodorant

Either because of stomach distress, food fermentation, or the wearing of false teeth, old people frequently have halitosis (bad breath). So wonder others consider them a nuisance.

But now Science has found that the regular use of Listerine will often overcome offensive mouth odors due to the fermentation of tiny bits of food on mouth, teeth, or dental plate surfaces.

This safe antiseptic and quick deodorant works quickly. It cleanses mouth, teeth, and nasal surfaces. Halitosis formation and putrefaction, a major cause of odors, and thus counteracts the odors themselves.

Try using Listerine every two or three days, so how much more wholesome it leaves your mouth. How it sweetens your breath. Listerine Pharmaceutical Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Don't offend others - Check halitosis with LISTERINE

TWO DEFECTS
 There are two big reasons why Knox will get nowhere politically:
 1. He lacks popular appeal.
 2. He lacks organized political backing.

Of the other two leading candidates, Borah is weak in political organization but has strong popular support. Landon has public strength — though less of it than Borah — but makes up for it by powerful political underpinnings.

Knox, on the other hand, lacks both. He is direct, concise, efficient. He has charm and some sense of humor, but the man in the street does not warm up to him as they do to Borah, Landon or Roosevelt.

There is a certain aloofness, an element of calculation which discourages personal enthusiasm.

A flood of canned publicity has been poured out by his campaign managers to humanize Knox. He has been painted as a happy-go-lucky Roubidoux Rider, a debonair newspaperman and boom companion.

But it has not worked. To the public at large, Knox has continued to be only a name. That certain intangible quality which Ellnor Glyn popularized as "It" is lacking and no amount of canned publicity can take its place.

NO MACHINE
 Knox might overcome the defects of his personality if he had a political organization.

But he hasn't. On various occasions he has been active politically — he was right bower to Teddy Roosevelt during the Bull Moose campaign — but he has sought office only once before.

Without state organization on which he could base his campaign and without close ties with the inner GOP leaders, Knox has been like a man with a shiny new automobile but no gas. He has tooted his horn bravely and loudly, but got nowhere.

Furthermore, he won't. His pants-talking columnist, Howard Vincent O'Brien, to whom Knox gives complete freedom, summed up the situation thus in The Chicago Daily News:

"The boss won't like this, but he hasn't a Chinaman's chance to be nominated for President."

At least one thing Knox can say, however, is that Herbert Hoover, grateful for past favors, is for him. And if, by some miracle, Frank Knox should be nominated and elected, the country would have in the White House fundamentally another Hoover.

CHAPTER XXXIV
DOCTOR LAWSON went back to his office and summoned Eve.

"Sit down, dear," he said, gently, when she appeared. "I've something to tell you about Marianne."

"Marianne — has anything happened?"

"No. But Leonard Bailey has been in love with her for years. She has treated him cruelly."

"Cruelly! Marianne couldn't be cruel!"

"Not the real Marianne, but the girl she became — was terribly cruel. Listen to me, Eve."

Then, Dr. Lawson told Eve the whole story and ended with, "Now Marianne, I'm sure, has found out how much she cares for Leonard, and he's engaged to Jill Jackson. He knows, too, that Marianne has changed. He knows where she is. He had a long talk with David. But it's too late for him to do anything about it."

"Too late? If they love each other?"

"I know Leonard Bailey," Dr. Lawson cut in. "He will not break his word to Jill Jackson."

"Then there's nothing we can do?"

"There's nothing we can do," Dr. Lawson's long, capable fingers tapped his desk.

"There's something," he finally said, reluctantly. "I hate to do it, and it probably won't work."

You run along, dear. I'll have to think this out carefully. After all, my specialty isn't hearts, and I've never had much use for a medical.

Long after Eve had gone he sat in deep thought.

Finally, he picked up the phone, got the real estate office, and asked for Jill Jackson. Perhaps he was a floundering fool. Human emotions — one never knew.

He winced a little when Jill's voice came over the wire.

"This is Dr. Lawson, Jill."

"How are you? And the new hospital?" Everything moving along all right?

"Great. I'm calling you about the hospital. We're having our formal opening next Tuesday afternoon. I'm sending you and Len invitations. But this is a special request that you both be here."

"Why, you darling!" Jill laughed gaily. "We wouldn't miss it. But thanks for calling."

Dr. Lawson hung up, his face crimson. He liked Jill — liked her

NEW YORK INSIDE OUT By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, April 14.—Even with a host of two thousand dollars before them, New York's songbirds haven't come forward to irritate their dear old city. The $2,000 is the prize offered by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers for a local anthem, but so far only about 200 have entered their patriotic efforts. . . . Seems the professional time jockeys can make more dough through the regular commercial channels. . . . Max Reinhardt, I hear, didn't get any salary for his lengthy labors on the postponed Franz Werfel show. "The Eternal Road." He's supposed to be waiting until the spectacle is produced next fall. But meanwhile Hollywood gives him about $150,000 for each of two contracted pictures, and so he won't be thrown out of his hotel room. . . . A very busy medic is Dr. Harry A. Covel, who sits in his offices at the Shubert Building from 8:15 to 11:30 every evening, answering emergency calls for the smiling salts. Sometimes it's a melodrama which sends theatergoers into a swoon. At other times he must relieve a bad bellyache brought on by one of those modern, poetic fantasies. Most of the time, however, the doctor has to patch up faltering actors whose throats or nervous systems go back on them at the last moment. . . . If the new shows continue to be of the quality demonstrated recently they might turn Dr. Covel loose on the playwrights.

COUNTRYMEN—Josephine Baker, the glamorous Harlem belle who set Paris and Budapest agog, is opening a new supper club, called Chez Josephine Baker, on East 54th Street. La Baker's European exploits, sinewy dancing and French accent are almost legendary by now, but there's a new story about her and Beatrice Lillie which has been panicking this city island for days.

Some weeks ago, it seems, Josephine went to a private party in town, excited at the prospect of meeting the comical Beatrice in person. The dusky lady had watched Miss Lillie perform, but had never been introduced to her offstage.

Josephine arrived first at the party. For an hour she bubbled with suppressed anticipation. When at last Miss Lillie arrived, La Baker rushed to the door and in her best French accent began gushing out her admiration for the comedienne's art—praising her qualities in detail and with lavish enthusiasm.

She listened quietly and appreciatively until Josephine concluded her lengthy tribute. Then, with the famous Lady Peel smile, she chirped: "You ain't so bad yerself, honey chile!"

NIGHTIES—Barbara Hutton's (i.e. the Countess I mean) old town house on East 5th Street is being chopped up and newly plastered to make way for a ritzy new hotspot. . . . Isn't there a limit to the number of blue-blazes who can pay cash for their drinks? . . . Another new spot is the Anchor Cafe, at Twelfth Avenue and 49th Street. This probably is the first night club to grace the Hudson River waterfront. Sutton Place and the East River have hitherto had the monopoly. . . . A unique eating place is the Zum Brauhaus, on 54th Street off Third Avenue. This German bierhaus, with its long wooden tables and old-fashioned wooden paneling, has a free and easy informality which is about the closest thing in town to the spirit of old New York before the War. The patrons are as widely assorted a crew as you're likely to discover, and the Zwickau and sauerkraut is the real stuff. . . . Prosit!

Easter's Origin

EASTER-TIME recalls the dramatic scenes of nearly 2,000 years ago in Palestine. Above is the Via Dolorosa in the Holy City as it appears today. It was along this Street of Sorrows that Jesus is supposed to have passed on his way to the crucifixion and his later resurrection.

Merchants Will Aid Horsemen In Staging Show

The horse show planned by the Contra Costa County Horsemen's Association will be jointly sponsored by the Richmond Merchants' Association and the Horsemen. It was learned yesterday following a meeting of the Merchants Association.

The horsemen's association, headed by Sheriff John A. Miller, president, had been planning the horse show for several weeks and the merchants voted to join in sponsoring the event. It also was planned to enlarge the show to include a rodeo and barbecue, and to hold a Spanish fiesta.

The horse show and rodeo will be held at the P. L. Castro Ranch on the San Pablo Creek Road, June 6 and 7, and the fiesta will be held in Richmond on the evening of June 6.

Details of the celebration planned as an annual event, will be completed by the two organizations soon. Clarence Johnson of the merchants association said.

More than 300 horses will take part in the horse show and rodeo, a grand parade is planned to open the Richmond fiesta, the parade continuing to the show grounds, where the horse show will open at 1:30 p.m., continuing to 5 o'clock.

Saturday night the horsemen will stage another Richmond parade. Sunday morning a junior horse show and rodeo will be held at the Castro ranch and Sunday afternoon show events will continue and there will be a big barbecue.

German Liner Broke Military Rule In Manila

MANILA, P. I. April 15, Wednesday.—UP—The Hamburg-American German world cruiser Reliance passed within the restricted area surrounding fortifications at the entrance to Manila bay when she arrived here March 27. American military authorities reported today.

The master of the Reliance, Captain H. Kieff, will be requested to show cause why administrative action should not be taken against him, customs officers disclosed.

Alvan Simonds, Boston saw manufacturer, and his wife left the ship here under police escort, charging German passengers on board had "insulted" them.

Simonds said the trouble started after he gave an interview to a newspaper in Singapore in which he said:

"I do not think anybody should agree with Germany on anything because she regards agreements as scraps of paper."

Hollywood Film Shop

HOLLYWOOD, April 14.—UP—Lloyd Corrigan, director of the new Technicolor picture, "Dancing Pirate," has learned that many policies of producers are subject to "government by the people."

Recently he wanted a giant pepper tree to dress the set of a Spanish village, constructed for his color picture. That species of tree is common in California and he thought nothing of ordering an assistant to get one.

"Just go out and buy one, haul it here and set it up," he ordered, expecting to see the tree on the set the next morning.

His assistant brought him up short by demanding how he was to get the tree. When Corrigan gave the assistant time to explain he learned a few things about trees in particular and "government by the people" for the movies in general.

In the first place, the assistant explained, trees just can't be jerked from the natural setting without getting permission of the owners. Moreover, he added, not many tree lovers like to see their prize growths jerked away—even for a considerable number of dollars.

"And that is not all," Corrigan was told. "Just suppose that we got the tree without a great deal of difficulty and it didn't cost too much. Well, the picture would be released and then a lot of tree lovers would see it. They know trees don't grow on sets, and they would write a lot of letters to tree associations condemning us and asking boycott of the picture."

Corrigan recovered but was still determined to have a tree for his set.

"Well, you can't have a good tree," the assistant said, "so you have to get a poor one and have the makeup department retouch it a little bit. First we will have to find a tree that has been condemned by the city or one that the owners want destroyed."

"Then when the letters come in condemning us for destroying a tree we just reply that he immortalized a tree in a picture that was going to be destroyed without anything to remember it by."

PAROLES FOR 29 GIVEN BY PRISON BOARD

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, April 14.—UP—The State board of prison terms today granted 29 paroles to San Quentin inmates at its April meeting here today.

Of the applications considered, 10 were continued, 42 denied, one postponed and three listed for further debate. Four deportation paroles were issued, and five convicts convicted of first degree murder were denied freedom.

SEVERAL REFUSED.
Convicts serving sentences for murder who were refused parole were George Green, Los Angeles; Harvey Fisher, Calaveras; John R. Daster, Santa Cruz; Lawrence McMullen, Los Angeles, and James Lungate, San Diego. All are serving life terms.

Parole was granted Perry Jamison, El Dorado county, to become effective when he has served 12 calendar years of his life term for first degree murder. The 12 year period expires in 1937.

PAROLES GRANTED.
The board also granted paroles to W. H. Gregory and J. E. Soderholm, and denied applications of James E. Cox and R. K. Weatherill, Alameda county.

Reginald E. Barrera, convicted of grand theft, was the only applicant to receive immediate parole. He will be permitted to go to sea for three years.

Barrera, a former Oakland brother, spent five months alone in a yacht at sea while a fugitive from justice. He was sought on charges of embezzlement between $175,000 and $200,000 entrusted to him by clients.

TENDENCIES TO DISEASE
Some people have more of a tendency to a certain disease than other people who live in almost the same way. For example, certain types of people are especially likely to develop tuberculosis, other types are prone to stomach ulcers, while still others have a definite tendency to rheumatism.

You often hear that some diseases are inherited. That is not true of most diseases; one does not inherit rheumatism or tuberculosis. However, a tendency to some special disease may be inherited. Several members of the same family who inherit the same tendency may by unwise habits of living, all develop the same disorder. There is a great deal of evidence that one may be born with a special leaning to some particular disease. It is the leaning which paves the way and dictates in what particular part of the body the disease which later develops, will locate.

Ever since the time of Hippocrates, doctors have been trying to classify patients into disease groups. What they've actually trying to do was to explain the different tendencies to disease. Within the last few years, excellent work has been done along this line, by doctors who studied the different types of body-build and who discovered that the shape of the body has a great deal to do with predisposing the patient to some special disorder. As an illustration, the tall, slender patient with a narrow face and long bones, is of the type most prone to develop phthisis or falling of the organs; while the patient with a short, chunky type of body-build is of the type most frequently developing blood vessel disorders such as high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries. The patient with a narrow, cramped chest and a diaphragm which does not move freely, may be said to have a leaning to tuberculosis of the lungs.

Instead of blaming heredity for the disease which later develops, it seems to me that the sensible thing to do is to realize that only an inclination is present at birth which has an influence in determining what disorder will be most likely to occur.

If this propensity to a special trouble is recognized early enough in life, it then becomes possible to prevent the eventual occurrence of the disorder to which the patient is inclined. For example, when the patient has an inclination toward tuberculosis, this will be overcome by a manner of living which develops the diaphragm and chest and which prevents enervation. The patient who shows early in life that he has a tendency to stiffness and soreness of the muscles after vigorous activity should learn to use his foods in correct combination and should learn to take the minimum of starch and sugar, at the same time that he keeps the colon clean, if he wishes to avoid the later development of rheumatism. Poor mixtures of even the best foods and intestinal uncleanness will do a great deal to build up the rheumatic diathesis which already exists.

The patient who is disposed to nervousness needs to learn how to relax and also needs to obtain sufficient recreation in out of door activities to obtain the required physical development.

In short, when the recognition of one's aptness to certain weaknesses is observed, the tendency may be entirely overcome by the systematic practice of good habits which are substituted for the bad ones which are so often carelessly encouraged. Regardless of the leaning toward disease with which one is born, it is possible to overcome that predisposition, if enough time and care are devoted to the problem.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Teeth)
Question: Murray G. writes: "X-ray pictures of my teeth show that several of them have pus pockets. Can you tell me how to locate I could pull them with my fingers. Would this be sufficient to cause me to have a trembling, weak sensation in the legs? No other trouble can be found after a thorough physical examination."

Answer: The presence of pus pockets at the root of the teeth would be sufficient to produce a weak sensation in the legs, together with trembling. Have the teeth extracted as advised by your dentist.

(Eye Bloodshot)
Question: Mr. W. W. wants to know, "What causes the eyes to appear bloodshot?"

Answer: The bloodshot condition of your eyes is probably due to eye-strain resulting from reading too long with an insufficient light, lack of sleep, infection of the eye, or from some defect of vision which should be corrected with glasses. Have the eyes examined and then take better care of them, avoiding undue eye strain.

(Are We Chemical Types?)
Question: Mr. Fred C. inquires: "Are we chemical types? If so, how can one find out what type he is? I understand that the different types require totally different diets."

Answer: I am acquainted with the classification of so-called chemical types, but do not believe they are of much value in the selection of food.

(Sallow Skin)
Question: Mrs. Catherine M. writes: "Is liver trouble capable of causing my skin to be sallow?"

Answer: A sluggish liver is one of the chief causes of sallowness of the skin.

Heart Drug Is Safe When Used Under Your Physician

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

DIGITALIS, or purple fox glove, is collected from the leaves of the second year's growth. It grows wild but is now extensively cultivated to provide a supply for medical use. It is one of the best and most reliable of our drugs. Nature seemed to realize that all people would need it and caused it to grow in profusion in all parts of the world. It possesses direct action on the heart, the circulation and the behavior of the kidneys.

It is surprising to have a number of persons write me, stating that they are taking it, and that it is doing them much good, but they fear they are being poisoned by it.

Mrs. V. M. D. of Louisiana is 85 years old and was in good health until a little over a year ago. Following an attack of influenza, she developed heart trouble and last January was compelled to rest in bed for two months. She says that at this time she suffered from high blood pressure and gall bladder trouble. Her physician felt that the gall bladder was the seat of the trouble. Now she is better, but her heart still bothers her some.

She has a little difficulty in breathing and the heart skips a beat occasionally. She has to keep taking digitalis each day, about 15 drops, but fears she is poisoning herself. She is not justified in thinking anything of the kind. This fear is quite common and cannot be explained in any way except that in the early years of the use of digitalis proper care was not always taken in the gathering and drying of the leaves.

It is Pure Now

Now digitalis is prepared with the greatest care. It is cultivated under the most careful supervision and gathered at the proper stage of development of the plant. All stages of manufacture are so ascertained and standardized that a physician knows the exact strength and activity of any preparation.

Until late years we did not know how to extract some of the deleterious portions without removing some of the good. It resulted that patients frequently could not take digitalis for a prolonged period without becoming nauseated, being troubled with a feeling of heat in the head, disturbances of vision, vertigo and a very slow pulse.

Now these conditions rarely occur, but if they do, stopping the drug corrects the trouble. Digitalis is a powerful drug and if unskillfully administered may cause harm. But any drug to do much good can also possess harmful effects.

Control of the Dose

The skillful and well-trained doctor can control digitalis to the very drop. He knows when and how to use large doses or small. Digitalis remedies the heart, the heart, by this action it draws excess blood from the lungs and forces it out to all portions of the body. It begins with a weakened heart muscle and leads to a normal client valves it strengthens and allows down the contractions and sends a more uniform supply of blood to the entire system. In cases of cardiac dropy it furnishes an almost perfect machine.

One ingredient or property of the drug, "Digitalin" contracts the blood vessels of the body, and another ingredient, "Digitoxin" dilates the arteries and contracts the heart. With this increased strength of the heart contractions, more blood is forced through the kidneys and this greatly increases the elimination of fluid, thus draining the surplus from the tissues. It is a wonderful drug, but must be handled with intelligence. Miss D. still has some shortness of breath. That suggests she is not taking quite enough, but her physician must advise as to that.

Dr. Chrisman invites inquiries and correspondence from readers. Address him in care of this newspaper.

Short Cuts

For the children's lunchbox try peanut butter spread on sandwiches. To two parts of peanut butter add one part of liquid honey and mix to a smooth paste.

Mind patterns on clothes should be allowed to dry before any attempt is made to clean them. Then use a brush, and as a final step sponge the stains with alcohol. Fix as a rule, particularly if the fabric will stand a vigorous brushing, the brush alone will do the trick.

A linoleum covered bathroom floor should be treated to a coat of lacquer or varnish. Either one will prevent water from soaking through to the floor, insure a longer life to the linoleum and leave the bathroom more sanitary.

A center lighting fixture in a bedroom gives a more restful light by means of a drum-shaped opaque shade. This prevents glare in the eyes of a person lying in bed.

Man Who Has Worked Long for the Aged

By TALBOT LAKE

Spring soon brings Mothers' Day, and a reminder that Frank E. Hering, of Indiana, credited by the National War Mothers as being the founder of the day, has worked unrelentingly for the cause of mothers and especially for old-age pensions for many years.

Mr. Hering, a handsome man, in middle age, and a speaker of eloquence and charm, was the first coach of the University of Notre Dame football team. His great force of personality overcame his slight build and he became a player of considerable ability, years ago. Afterward, he was a coach and teacher, and later, growing interested in fraternal society work, he became an editor and leader.

His chief love, in his mature years, has been his fight to persuade state legislatures to pass old age security acts. He and his associates were successful in so many states that a large number had old age pensions long before the passage of the Federal security act.

A few years ago Mr. Hering was given a decoration by the War Mothers' organization for his work in devotion to mothers and other elderly people. Childless, he has made a reputation as a good son. He lives in South Bend, is a native of Pennsylvania, and editor of a fraternal magazine.

I recall an incident connected with Mr. Hering which was very touching. A wild canary flew into his house and was captured. It became domesticated and could be permitted to fly about the rooms, clinging to the draperies, perching on the furniture. It would stand on a finger of its master in an attitude of great affection. Mr. and Mrs. Hering lavished much care on this little thing but they did not neglect human dependents.

Some New Bags

Many fine new styles in umbrellas are seen this spring. The umbrella is an article which people are likely to use as long as they have it. It would be well for the housekeeper to check up on the household supply and think of good replacement. The manufacturers have turned out some very attractive new styles for men, women and children.

QUESTION: "I had a bad case of acne several years ago and had it cured by X-ray treatments that cost more than $100. It is coming back again. How can I stop it? Also, what can I do about scars remaining from the old case?"

—Worried.

You had better see your doctor and see if he can find out what is causing the acne to reappear. It may be that you are run-down and need a tonic to build up your resistance. Perhaps you need a change of diet. Give your skin thorough cleansings and use a healing lotion to dry up the little eruptions as soon as they appear. The scars might have been caused by the X-ray treatments and you cannot remove them. You may be able to soften them by massage and an astringent.

QUESTION: "What kind of perfume would you suggest for a rather plain girl? I am small and have rather mouse-colored hair that I wear in a short bob. I usually wear tailored or sporty clothes." —Helen.

For daytime I would suggest one of the scented toilet waters. Your fragrance should be light and outdoorsy. There is a lilac skin perfume that I think you would like. This one also comes in gardenia and violet if you prefer them. For evening get a light bouquet.

Guide to Charm

Each Day Can Help To Beauty

By JACQUELINE HUNT

LET our beauty schedule help you be a lovely lady this spring! Just in case you missed the beginning in yesterday's column, we planned exercises, a facial and a beauty sleep for Mondays and a special hair treatment for Tuesday evenings. So let's get on with the program!

Wednesday

Set Wednesday evenings aside for your manicure, beautifying hand treatment and pedicure in addition to your cleansing routine and quick, cleansing bath. After the bath, when the cuticles are softened by the warm water, is the best time for these treatments.

Have your nails oval. Long, sharp points are out! And do not file the nails too close at the sides or you will make the cuticles sensitive and encourage splitting. If your nails are in good condition apply polish after shaping, smoothing and working back the cuticles. If the nails are brittle and the cuticles ragged, soak the fingertips in warm olive oil, slip on old gloves and leave on overnight. Do not use polish for a week or two, or until the condition has improved.

The toenails require exactly the same care as the fingernails. File them, buff them and polish them! Then massage both the feet and the hands with a rich softening cream, wipe away the excess and use a mild skin tonic.

Thursday

Give the eyes special attention to insure their brilliance and the clean, neat line of the eyebrow. Brush the lashes and brows after you have cleansed your face and applied softening cream. Brush the brows into place and then tweeze away the hairs that fall outside of the most flattering natural line. After plucking, sponge the brows with antiseptic or alcohol.

Finally bathe the eyes with a solution of boric acid or some other good eye wash to soothe and cleanse them. After your evening bath, press pads of cotton squeezed out of eye tonic, witch hazel or boric acid over your eyelids for a few minutes.

Friday

This is the evening to prepare for a week-end! Have a leisurely beauty bath, using a bath oil or massaging the body with warm olive oil first and having the tub well scented with your favorite bath salts.

After the bath, massage with a cooling toilet water or eau de Cologne. But first, give your clothes a good cleaning out. Mend loose hems that have become loosened, sew on missing snaps or buttons and see that the linings touch on your dresses are crisp and fresh.

Saturday

If you can arrange it, allow an hour or two during the morning or afternoon for swimming, a dance period or outdoor sports, such as riding, golfing, tennis or gardening. Fresh air and bodily activity will do more than any thing to put a glow into your complexion and a sparkle into your eyes.

Sunday

This is a day of rest. Plan to have a short nap in the afternoon. While you are in bed, have a lazy facial treatment and place little compresses over your eyes.

Thick Sour Cream Base Of Sauces and Gravies

By JUDITH WILSON

GRAVIES, sauces, and salad dressings, as well as feathery biscuits, muffins and cakes depend for their goodness, on thick sour cream. Just in case you have forgotten how many things can be made with sour cream and "clabber" here are some recipes for you.

Vegetable Salad

Mix together 3 cups finely shredded cabbage, 1 cup grated raw carrots, 1 cup celery sliced fine and 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper. Chill thoroughly. Make a salad dressing by blending 1 cup sour cream, 3 tablespoons honey, 4 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon salt and a few grains paprika. Pour the dressing over the vegetables, mix well and let stand 1/2 hour in the refrigerator. Serve in nests of crisp lettuce. This is a good dressing for fresh fruit salad, too.

Brides Give Easter Own Style Note

By IRENE VAIL

New York — Spring is here. Wouldn't you think it was mid-summer so far in advance of the season? The flowers in bloom! It's a traditional sort of spring, all life and color, young looking white collars, young looking curls, and taken all in all an air of joyousness.

Easter time is bridal time. Such being the case let's get to the business of discussing trousseaux.

Speaking practically trousseaux vary little from any ordinary wardrobe with the great exception of the wedding dress which continues to be along traditional lines—or doesn't, according to the bride's preference in such matters.

The faintly tinted satin bridal gown is not new but the lavender tinted satin, this year's version of the idea, may be said to be distinctly new.

We have had pale ice tints and flesh and ivory deep enough to be called yellow. We have had oyster white and pearly tints, even palest greens, so the bride of today, who doesn't want to be married in traditional white has a wide color range from which to choose.

Bridal parties in the violin shades are another new note and with this color American Beauty is often combined. Many bridal party dresses are being designed along tunic lines, the tunic often so sheer as to show the foundation color.

You will remember how often I told you of the importance of the veiled idea, one sheer used over another, or over a stiff silk in another color. Taffeta leads for the foundation fabric of the sheer dress for any and all occasions.

I think you will find that a straight, pencil line, foundation of discovery is yet Philip's motive. Though by itself innocent, the habit may lead him into temptation and trouble one of these days.

Wherever you find a child with such a burning curiosity to find out what other persons have you may be sure that he has practically no tangible assets to call his own. Philip's mother, for example, assumes a partnership attitude toward his belongings. This cannot go here and that cannot go there. And when she gets annoyed with him, she becomes the boss and even may take something from him for good. This is unfortunate for Philip. Every child wants the pleasure of owning things outright and needs the experience.

It may be that Philip really hopes to find something for himself in his rummaging. Indeed, many a time he has asked, "Mother, may I keep this?" Usually the answer is, "You put that right back in daddy's bureau where you found it."

Don't nag and scold a child like Philip. Don't put others' belongings behind lock and key. Rather give him the right and help him to acquire property of his own.

Every boy ought to have his own room, or at least share one with a brother. On account of the depression this has not been feasible in so many families, but it is an object worth working toward. The sense of privacy, of proprietorship, is a good character developer. Besides, a boy who has belongings and a place to keep them is less likely to be a problem.

Not Fair to the Boy

I see no point in trailing around with anyone who is uncooperative. It might develop that you did change your mind about this boy, but until he does click with you I would not bother about him.

It most certainly is not fair to him to be used as an emergency escort or to fill empty evenings.

Brothers have a way of getting the low-down on their contemporaries, so check your brother's opinion is perhaps more to be trusted than that of your parents. He is in a position to know. Unless he is one of those jealous brothers who resent the attentions of any man to their sister, I feel that you can afford to trust his opinion.

It should be a simple matter to find out whether or not this flat boy drinks or anything else about him.

In the meantime, why not stop taking all this so seriously and enjoy yourself without any thought of whom and when you will marry, holding the question of marriage in abeyance for years?

Mrs. Martin will be glad to answer in this column questions of general interest. Mrs. Martin cannot reply individually to every correspondent. Names will not be published. Please address her care of this paper and use only one side when writing.

QUESTION: "Should a baby be held before or after the baby is born? A dear friend will become a mother soon, and I would like to give her a shower of baby things.—F. T."

ANSWER: Such showers generally take place three or four weeks after the baby's arrival, providing the baby and mother are well. In this way those who are invited know whether to get gifts of a girl or boy child, or twins. The shower should be held at the other's home.

The simplest way is to invite the lady to tea some afternoon. The one friend supervising the affair can pour and make a conversation for the mother as possible.

QUESTION: "Should a man as soon as being introduced to another man?—E. H."

ANSWER: Yes, if the other man is older and distinguished. While it is not necessary to rise when two men are of about equal age and rank, to do so is a mark of politeness and cordiality.

Young Girls Do Well to Heed the Judgment of Their Parents

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

THE judgment of a girl of 18 is nothing to bank on. She has not had time to develop what little she naturally possesses and cannot have acquired sufficient experience to be much use. She is apt to be in a fog about life and love and in no condition of mind to decide any important issue. Why children seem impelled to oppose their parents' judgment is beyond me. They seem to be perverse in this respect and have a tiresome habit of refusing to agree with their parents about most things, especially about the opposite sex.

The young man this girl's parents approve may or may not be all they think him. The boy they oppose may be a much better fellow than they credit him with being.

If the girl has a grain of sense she will get all the pleasure she can out of being eighteen and let her future unfold and develop as it is bound to do.

It's not unlikely that both these boys will disappear from her life and their places be filled with far more eligible men. Why not wait? Eighteen is young to marry. I know that our mothers and grandmothers were not of this mind, but it is risky, nevertheless. Read the letter of "Black Eyes."

"Dear Mrs. Martin: What do you think of a girl eighteen going with whom she pleases? Should she? I am in love with a good-looking young man who is very attractive to the girls. My parents say they will not let me go with him because they think he drinks."

A Brother's Right

"They have never seen him drunk and I haven't either. They think he drinks because he runs around a lot. He does smoke, but there are only a few who don't these days."

"He doesn't have a car of his own, but I don't mind that because he can always get one when he wants to go on a date. My brother says if he ever comes to see me he will tell him to leave."

"What do you think of that? Does a brother have a right to try to boss his sister like that? There is another boy who has always been crazy about me, but I don't care anything about him. I know he has a good name.—Black Eyes."

FICKERT AGAIN QUESTIONED IN MOONEY TRIAL

SAN FRANCISCO, April 14.—Tom Mooney's attorneys today resumed cross-examination of Charles M. Fickert, former district attorney with the assertion that he had promised freedom to a Prison inmate if he would testify against the famed labor prisoner.

George Davis, counsel for Mooney at his habeas corpus hearing, introduced a letter written by Alice Kidwell to her husband in which she said Fickert had offered him release from prison if he would agree to be a prosecution witness.

Davis contended that Fickert never had called Mrs. Kidwell to testify in the Mooney trial—she assertedly saw Mooney and Warren Billings near the scene of the Preparedness day bombing—because he discovered he had no power to effect her husband's release.

Fickert, however, claimed he hadn't used Mrs. Kidwell as a witness because she was being black-mailed and threatened by the Mooney defense "as were other state witnesses."

Davis then introduced an affidavit signed by Mrs. Kidwell in which details of a conversation with Fickert were related. Fickert said he couldn't remember talking with Mrs. Kidwell and didn't recall that she ever had been to his office.

The attorney presented photostatic copies of two San Francisco newspaper pictures in which the Kidwells and Nellie and Sadie Edean were shown in Fickert's office.
